Coalition Updates.

- In a powerful display of creativity and cultural resilience, the women of Panna, in the state of Madhya Pradesh, have developed a song celebrating the benefits of mushrooms. This self-composed song serves not only as a testament to their newfound skills but also as a tool for spreading awareness among their community and beyond.

The story of Panna's tribal women cultivating mushrooms is not just about farming; it's a story of empowerment, resilience, and hope. For decades, the tribal communities of Panna have struggled with economic hardships, often exacerbated by the need to migrate in search of livelihoods and battling silicosis. Beyond economic benefits, mushroom farming has addressed critical issues of food and nutrition insecurity. Prithvi Trust has built a mushroom shed in the village itself to provide training on mushroom production to women mine workers.
